(President of International Association of Universities, France)

“IAU’s mission and vision over time and into the future”

International cooperation and collaboration is a basis to ensure quality Higher Education (HE). Sharing and exchanging knowledge, competences and experiences is of utmost importance for HE to contribute significantly to addressing the UN Agenda 2030 and the 17 sustainability goal. The International Association of Universities (IAU) started to celebrate 70th Anniversary year on 9 December 2020, the day of the signing of the IAU Constitution back in 1950 and reaffirms its commitment as global platform for international cooperation among HE institutions and organisations around the world. The COVID-19 pandemic, with its immediate and severe consequences for HE and for society at large, has highlighted the importance of higher education and of international cooperation, within the HE sector and with societal stakeholders and policymakers at large. Cooperation to learn and share experiences to develop HE will help meet local needs and expectations intertwined with the global reality. IAU analyses and informs the international trends in HE with focus on leadership, internationalisation, sustainability and technology and now also consequences of Covid19 on HE. These international perspectives and transformations are shaping the transformation and future of HE and are of particular importance for the theme of this conference: “Empowering all for international education”.

Michael MURPHY

(President of European University Association, Belgium)

“A vision for Europe’s Universities in 2030”

Universities undergo constant transformation. They respond to societal developments and with their missions in education, research, innovation and culture they are themselves drivers of change. Rapid societal, scientific and technological changes pose questions to university leadership about the strategic directions to take for the future: How to best serve society in the decade ahead? How should Europe’s universities look in ten years time? What would be the ideal university? What needs to change and what must remain? EUA has invited its members to reflect on these questions together to develop the Association’s vision of Europe’s Universities 2030. Building on EUA’s long-standing work, the vision for Europe’s Universities 2030 aims to inspire and inform members, policy makers and external partners. The presentation will outline key aspects of this vision.

(Education Advisor to Qatar Foundation, Qatar)

“Reinventing Internationalizing Higher Education for the Post-Pandemic World: Global Issues, Local Actions”

In the midst of the pandemic, the world has experienced a dramatic transformation which will affect the “business-as-usual” operational model of higher education institutions and their internationalization efforts. Since many of traditional international engagements of educational institutions no longer are viable -including the conventional student mobility schemes- higher education is posed to re-conceptualize its work. What are key global trends and how to address main current and upcoming challenges? How to transition from a crisis mode into one in which opportunities for a re-imagined internationalization can be envisioned?

Moderator: Fiona HUNTER (Centre for Higher Education Internationalisation (CHEI) at Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Italy)

CLOSING PLENARY

Katherine P. FRANK

(Chancellor, University of Wisconsin-Stout, USA)

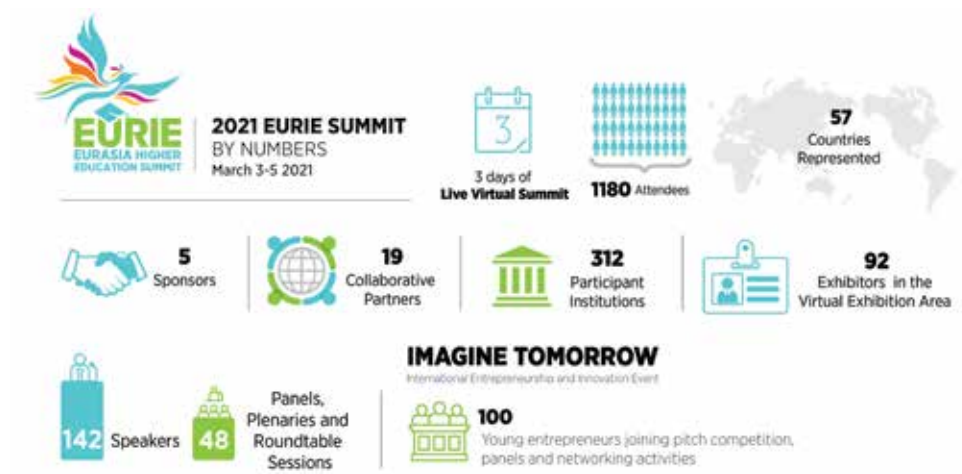

“Internationalizing Higher Education in a Post-Pandemic Landscape”

Pre-pandemic challenges faced by institutions of higher education were uniquely revealed, accelerated, and exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Heightened awareness, increased understanding, and careful planning have provided us with newfound opportunities to realign our priorities, rise to the occasion, and build back a better tomorrow. The pandemic has shown that international education is essential to learning and to addressing current and future challenges. Our institutional ability to adapt, innovate, and lead collectively through global partnerships is core to these efforts.
