❖ UNIMED: New announcement of admission for the year 2021-22 at the School of Post-Graduate Studies in Archaeology, University of Salento (Lecce, Italy)

The School of Post-Graduate Studies in Archaeology at the University of Salento announced the public Call for applications for the competitive selection procedure for admission to the next academic year. The School is one of the foremost schools of its type in Italy. Its lecturers and students can boast innovative fieldwork around the Mediterranean, the Near East, North Africa.

Its curriculum is broad based, extending from Paleolithic to Modern times, and covers not only archaeology, bio-archaeology, landscape studies and ancient topography, but also art history, numismatics, museum studies and dating techniques. Recent additions to the syllabus include human ecology, cultural heritage management and economics. The School is also actively involved in investigating the effects of environmental change and increasing cultural tourism on our unique heritage. Three curricula are currently active;

- Prehistory and Protohistory.
- Classical Archaeology.
- Medieval Archaeology.

Applications for the competitive selection procedure must be made within and not after 12:00 (Italian time) on 8 October 2020. The duration of the course is two years (120 ECTS). The course is taught in Italian.

❖ Times Higher Education (TIMES) WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE A STUDENT IN 2021?

Join us on 22 September 2021 for the THE Student Success Forum to redefine the student experience for 2021 and beyond. New students are entering university having never sat formal exams or been able to visit their campus in person, they will have less knowledge, less experience, and require more support than those before them.

As they navigate their new world, higher education institutions must adapt their processes accordingly to account for this. How can universities prepare their students for success when their experience is so unknown?

The forum will also feature a detailed data masterclass providing exclusive insight into the metrics and methodology behind the WSJ/THE US College Rankings 2022, following their launch on 21 September 2021.
